- 4: Food safety: water management in the food industry.
- 5 : Bio-sourced products and valorization of by-products in the food industry

Objectives

This scientific event aims to bring together specialists in the agri-food and nutrition sector to discuss current challenges related to food safety, nutrition, and public health. It follows in the footsteps of the five previous editions organized by the Research Laboratory in Science, Technology, and Sustainable Development of the Department of Food Science over the past five years.

Intended for teacher-researchers, doctoral students, and industry professionals, this seminar serves as a platform for sharing and presenting research findings related to its core themes. It also aims to strengthen collaboration between national and international universities, as well as socio-economic partners, by fostering the creation of thematic networks aligned with national priorities: food security, public health, and renewable energy.

The selected themes are of strategic importance to the country's economy. Our goal is to co-develop, in partnership with economic stakeholders and research centers with expertise in the field, a shared vision for the future of agriculture and the agri-food industry in an increasingly complex and high-stakes global context.
